INFOR DISTRIBUTION SOLUTIONS

DO BUSINESS BETTER.

Distribution is a fast-paced and competitive industry with lots of moving parts. To prosper, companies must be able to move beyond the immediate to seek out and adopt new growth strategies while maintaining costs and adding value in everything they do. An organization's success will depend on its ability to quickly source materials and work better with new suppliers by seamlessly integrating them into its end-to-end supply chain. Ready access to information about suppliers, inventory levels, outstanding orders, and shipments translates to cost control and rapid order turn around.

As roles within the supply chain change, new customer opportunities naturally arise. Giving customers a great experience, whether it's handling their order inquiry or providing product support, is therefore essential. Forward-thinking distributors require systems that help them deal with complex issues like these while managing the bottom line.

Regardless of your global reach or the breadth of your product offering, Infor Distribution Solutions offers everything you need to cost-effectively grow your business. If you manage an extended supply chain, it provides broad coverage of these important core business processes: plan, source, buy, make/assemble, ship, sell, and service.

You get a comprehensive and integrated set of tools that provides functional oversight and effective control of your operations whether they involve one location or several. You'll be equipped to deliver the accurate forecasting you need to develop corporate financial and merchandise plans based on anticipated demand for goods or anticipated account sales volume; take control of your supplier network, make optimal sourcing/supplier decisions, and streamline purchasing and contract management; and extend your business through delivery of new services, as well as value-added services such as kitting and assembly. With Infor Distribution Solutions, you'll streamline decision making and process execution to better ensure ongoing improvements in customer sales and service—from order placement through customer shipment.

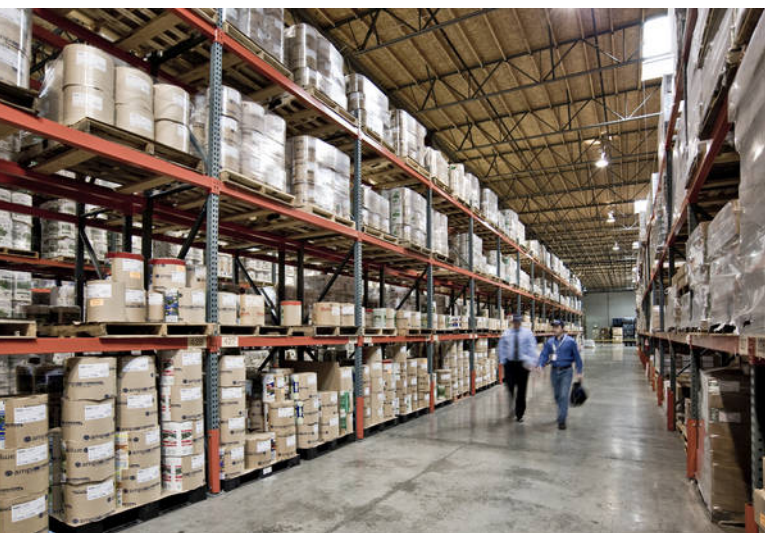

Components include:

Advanced order and supply chain management.

Balance demand and supply throughout your entire inventory cycle regardless of the diversity of products you carry or the location of your suppliers. Infor delivers visibility and control over every aspect of your inventory lifecycle with ready access to source material, supplier information, and inventory stocking levels. Effectively manage the supply chain from customer order placement to product requisition, customer shipment, and inventory replenishment.

Inventory management and control.

Make your inventory perform for your business. Get a jump on inventory replenishment through forecasting tools that let you replenish your stock from the most efficient locations and avoid last-minute special orders and drop shipments. Improve inventory turns and make the most of excess inventory through features which support select pricing and promotion. Get the tools you need to branch out and better integrate a diversity of products and suppliers into your mix.

Warehouse management.

Streamline the movement of goods in and out of your warehouse and increase your ability to manage inventory. From shipment visibility through receiving, putaway, picking, packing, and shipping, Infor tools will automate the process, improve labor utilization, and dramatically improve the flow of goods from suppliers to customers.

Light manufacturing and kitting.

Seamlessly extend your current systems to accommodate new value-added business offerings including light manufacturing, assembly, packaging, and other services. Quickly address new operational procedures regardless of whether they are simple, complex, incorporate multiple suppliers, or involve a multi-step manufacturing process. Gain control from order through finished product delivery with tracking and costing of components, routing, labor estimates, special charges, and overhead.

Logistics and transportation management.

Better manage your reliance on an extended group of suppliers, manufacturers, shippers, and customer fulfillment partners who represent a complex set of variables that must be tracked and monitored. Infor provides logistics tools and transportation management capabilities to help you manage that flow and the smooth tendering of goods from one node of operation to another.

Financial management.

Accelerate the performance of financial management systems that have been around for some time. Important to your business are the depth and the flexibility of these systems to integrate with and accommodate new automation processes and requirements unique to the distribution industry. With Infor, you will gain the ability to incorporate important financial processing capabilities such as the ability to manage multiple general ledgers or dynamic payment processing—capabilities that are critical financial management tasks that might otherwise increase liability and risk to the business.

Customer management and marketing.

As a distributor, you need an effective solution that allows you to manage all customer-facing aspects of your business, including an increasing demand for customized orders with shorter and shorter delivery windows. Working with Infor, you can now target by customer profile and manage all aspects of the customer relationship—from account setup, to transaction processing, and service delivery. Fully integrated distribution management means you'll be able to identify ways to better leverage customer relationships with promotional and cross-selling opportunities.

After sales service.

As you look to expand the role you play within the commercial sales arena, the ability to service, repair, and address warranty procedures for both the customer and supplier can contribute significant revenue and create additional selling opportunities. Having visibility to product catalogs, order status, and customer purchase history translates to better problem resolution turnaround times, cost savings, and more responsive customer service.
